Cultural relativism is the view that no culture is superior to any other culture when comparing systems of law, politics, etc. Its rule that all cultural beliefs are equally valid. Cultural relativism is the principle of regarding the beliefs, values, and considering of a culture from the viewpoint and inside that culture itself. In sociology, the principle practiced to avoid judging another culture by the standards of one's own culture. In other word Cultural relativism refers to figure out a culture on its own terms and not to make judgments applying the norms of one's own culture.

For better understanding consider the example .The treatment and place of refugees in some campuses in different countries. There is no special right for people, required to obey the host countries 'rules and so on. The paper tries to increase familiarity of cultural practices that are not typically part of one's own culture. Applying cultural relativism's perspective leads to the idea that no one culture is superior than another culture when compared to systems of morality, law, politics, etc.

It is a critical that cultural norms and standard derive their meaning within an absolute social context. Furthermore sociologist believe that there is no specific standard of good or evil, therefore every decision and judgment of what is right and wrong is individually decided in each society. It should be also reminded that any opinion on ethics is subject to the perspective of each person within their particular culture.

Many thinkers in relativisms areas, believe that different cultures have different moral code. These customs cannot be said to be correct or incorrect .There is no such independent standard; every standard is culture-bound. So it's not good idea to think one culture is better than any other cultures. In a holistic analyzing of the term cultural relativism, the basic attempts are promoting the understanding and acquainting of cultural aspects that are totally unfamiliar to other cultures
